LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this live activity, participants should be better able to:

- Design a comprehensive treatment plan for acne patients based on clinical guidelines, incorporating pharmacologic and nonpharmacologic strategies.
- Discuss the clinical relevance of the most recent research on the etiologies and therapy of acne vulgaris.
- Discuss the topical treatment pipeline for acne.
- Identify patients at risk for various skin lesions, including actinic and seborrheic keratoses and nonmelanoma skin cancers.
- Describe therapeutic approaches to actinic keratosis that optimize efficacy in treating lesions while reducing risk for neoplastic complications.
- Differentiate seborrheic keratosis from other skin lesions, particularly melanoma.
- Match patients with the most appropriate interventions for effective and cosmetically acceptable treatment of SK lesions.
- Design evidence-based, guideline-driven treatment strategies for patients with AD based on disease severity with the goal of clear or almost clear skin.
- Incorporate strategies for use of new therapies aimed at blocking the inflammatory mediators of AD.
- Identify which allergens are likely to be problematic for patients with atopy and integrate patch testing when appropriate.
- Discuss the risks and benefits of CAR-T cell therapy in melanoma.
- Differentiate among potential causes of contact dermatitis and the treatment approaches required.
- Explain the multiple entities that are encompassed by the umbrella term “toxic erythema of chemotherapy” (TEC).
- Discuss the prevention and management of cutaneous AEs associated with chemotherapies and radiation therapy.
- Discuss basic approaches to perform a nail unit biopsy.
- Discuss surgical approaches to treating rhinophyma.
- Incorporate simple surgical tips for large wounds, wound under tension, or to increase efficiency and patient satisfaction.
- Apply basic dermoscopy to the assessment of skin lesions.
- Incorporate newer dermoscopy imaging technologies in clinical practice.
- Describe evidence-based strategies for the diagnosis and pharmacologic management of hyperhidrosis.
- Describe the data on the new topical anticholinergic agents in the management of hyperhidrosis.
- Distinguish key characteristics of emerging and newly approved agents for treating skin infections such as ABSSTI (acute bacterial skin and soft tissue infections).
- Distinguish malignant from nonmalignant suspicious neoplasms.
- Design a management plan for melanomas at all stages of development.
- Design treatment strategies appropriate for pediatric patients with common dermatologic conditions.
- Identify characteristics in pediatric patients that suggest increased risk for conversion of benign moles to dysplastic nevi or melanoma.
- Describe characteristics of IHs that are more likely to require medical intervention.
- Identify how to diagnose and treat common pediatric hair diseases.
- Differentiate the various photodermatoses from other dermatologic conditions whose symptoms manifest in similar ways.
- Describe the algorithm for the diagnosis of photodermatoses.
- Discuss photoprotection with patients, including pediatric patients and their caregivers.
- Describe the pathophysiology of psoriasis and its associated comorbidities.
- Diagnose and treat patients with psoriasis appropriately, based on current clinical guidelines.
- Design treatment strategies that incorporate biologic therapies into the management of appropriately selected patients with psoriasis.
- Increase routine screening for psoriatic arthritis in patients with psoriasis.
- Design self-education and patient education programs as part of the treatment plan for rosacea treatment.
- Discuss appropriate treatment strategies for rosacea, based on individual signs and symptoms as well as knowledge of the indications, efficacy, and risks of available and emerging rosacea therapies.
- Describe the presentation, diagnosis and management of common tropical diseases.
